Date of initial submission: 28 January 2015
Date of this updated submission: 26 February 2015

Rationale

While there are many symbols for astronomical bodies and atmospheric phenomena in the Unicode Standard, there is none for an observer of these. A symbol for an observer can be useful in illustrating scientific discussions.

An international symbol for an observer was mentioned and drawn (see above) by Professor Charles Bailyn in Yale University course ASTR-160: Frontiers and Controversies in Astrophysics Lecture 2 - Planetary Orbits<sup>1</sup>. I went looking for it on codepoints.net, a site dedicated to all the characters defined in the Unicode Standard, and in Unicode’s own Miscellaneous Symbols and Pictographs chart at <http://www.unicode.org/charts/PDF/U1F300.pdf>. My search has been unsuccessful as it seems there is currently no unicode symbol for an observer.

Existing Eye Symbol

While a symbol for an eye, also known as sight, does exist (U+1F441 EYE — I do not have a font in my system that displays it), I believe it is still worthwhile to have a specific symbol for an observer because the existing eye depicted in a frontal view is more representative of the organ’s anatomy rather than the act of observation, which is better represented by a profile view of an eye indicating a direction.

Examples of Existing Glyphs an Observer Symbol Would Complement

Sun ☼ First Quarter Moon ☾ Comet ☄ White Four Pointed Star ✧

Proposed Observer Symbol & File Downloads

Above is a symbol for an observer I made and dedicated to the Public Domain with the following license: <https://creativecommons.org/publicdomain/zero/1.0/>

Observer Symbol in Use

Type a lowercase ‘o’ for version looking to right, and an uppercase ‘O’ for version looking to the left.
 An observer and a star, an observer and a cat:

Please consider my submission so the community at large can have a representation of an observer to use in publications worldwide. I am happy to make changes necessary for final approval should this proposal be accepted.
